Supes step up to support embattled Fieldbrook Hall

Daniel Mintz
MAD RIVER UNION
 HUMBOLDT – As supporters of community halls continue to rally for their local control, the county's Board of Supervisors has approved a resolution describing them as "independent corporations."

time leading member of the Fieldbrook Community Club, described the grange organizations' ownership claim as "a corporate land grab" and asked people to sign a petition at the Fieldbrook Market protesting it. Community hall supporter Margie Plant said the grange organizations' legal assertions of ownership "can only be considered as a takeover of community property" and "the legal proceedings thus far have not resulted in justice for our communities."

A resolution "expressing support for local community halls" was approved at the Jan. 25 board meeting and states that "local community halls believe their communities are the legal owners of their properties." Halls in Bayside, Fieldbrook and Redcrest are named in the resolution and all have come under legal actions taken by the national and state grange organizations that claim ownership of them.

Supervisors Steve Madrone and Mike Wilson, the sponsors of the resolution, stressed that the intent is to generally support the community halls, not take a stance on the legal actions. "There's a lot of convoluted discussion going on around community halls, granges and everything else – and that's not what this is about," said Madrone, adding that the resolution seeks to "simply offer our support to local community halls."

But when Madrone handed the presentation over to invited "panelists" from local halls, the "discussion" he referred to was delved into. Rowena Miller, a long-

Supervisor Mike Wilson acknowledged the "legal battles" but described the resolution as keeping at arm's length from them.

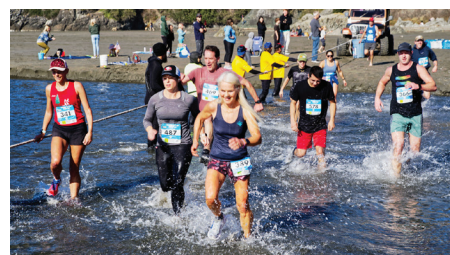

"I don't think we are taking a legal stand necessarily in terms of what's been adjudicated," he said, adding that what's being supported is for "the grange and the community halls to move forward in the most beneficial way possible."

Supervisor Rex Bohn noted the consequences of the legal outcomes. "It pains a lot of people to see the Bayside Grange locked up and shut down," he said.

But he doesn't see favorable odds in challenging the grange organizations. "I think the horses are already out of the barn, I'm sorry to say," said Bohn.

He recommended that residents of the communities "organize and figure out a way to work with 'em."

Though Bohn and Supervisor Michelle Bushnell were wary of the resolution being perceived as taking sides in a legal battle, they joined a unanimous vote to approve it.

TRINIDAD TO CLAM BEACH RUN 2022

GET YOUR FEET WET The annual Trinidad to Clam Beach Run started at Saunders Park in Trinidad Sunday morning. Runners journeyed along Scenic Drive, down to Moonstone Beach, across Little River, to the finish line on Clam Beach. There they were welcomed by the Marching Lumberjacks, plus tasty chili provided by Brett Shuler Catering. It was a gorgeous 60 degree January day to run in the sun. PHOTOS BY MATT FILAR | UNION

HSU era ends; hello Cal Poly Humboldt

Kevin L. Hoover
MAD RIVER UNION
CAL POLY HUMBOLDT

– A wave of pro-active change backed by extraordinary investment is sweeping Arcata, advancing its evolution with forward-looking, landscape-altering projects even in an era of pandemics, polarization and political paralysis.

Along with initiatives such as the related Craftsman Mall housing project, Gateway Area Plan, the Project Homekey and Safe Parking homeless solutions, the conversion of Trinity Hospital to a child-care facility, there's a new university in town. Newly named, anyway.

Humboldt State University is no more, having given way to Cal programming, new facilities including housing, and thousands of new students, faculty and staff to the North Coast.

As comprehensive as the evolving Polytechnic Prospectus document is, essential details remain only partially revealed to the public, and may not yet be fully known to the university. One is still how the varying housing requirements of Cal Poly Humboldt's students and staff are going to be met.

Another 600-pound

gorilla that won't tolerate being ignored is how Humboldt's already strained local medical and dental infrastructure is going to meet the needs of its many new students and families.

During a Zoom press event heralding the university's rebranding, CPH President Tom Jackson acknowledged the need for more physicians, nurses and dentists. He said only that related discussions had been underway since the polytechnic conversion idea was first raised, and that efforts are underway to recruit more medical talent.

ENF pledges support for Life Care Humboldt

LIFE CARE HUMBOLDT
HUMBOLDT – Long time owners of Eureka Natural Foods, Rick and Betty Littlefield, have pledged $100,000 to the Life Care Humboldt initiative.

Their hope is to help realize the dream of a quality continuing care facility in a natural setting to serve the Humboldt community.

“We love Humboldt County and hope to live the rest of our lives here surrounded by friends that share our dreams of active living in a supportive, mindful community,” said Rick Littlefield. “We hope that making this pledge public will inspire and encourage others to generously support this landmark program.”

Life Care Humboldt is a non-profit formed to plan, build, and support Humboldt’s first and only all-inclusive Life Plan Community for adults 60 years of age and older. This community will offer older adults independent private residences, shared dining and activities, assisted living and memory care all on one campus.

The community will reflect North Coast culture and values and include a mix of income levels representative of Humboldt County. Residents will have access to the arts, fresh and healthy foods, fitness programs, and a holistic approach to wellness. More information is available at lifecarehumboldt.org.

The Life Care Humboldt Board of Directors express their sincere thanks to Rick and Betty Littlefield and over 140 other donors for their commitment to supporting local seniors as they age and become more vulnerable.

McKINLEYVILLE FUTURE FARMERS OF AMERICA
FUTURE FARMERS The McKinleyville FFA competed in a speaking competition. SUBMITTED PHOTO

On Monday, Jan. 24, the McKinleyville Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapter went to Arcata to compete in the Sectional Speaking competition.

This competition is filled with public speaking events such as Creed, Job Interview, Impromptu, Extemporaneous, Prepared, and Parliamentary Procedure.

The top four students in each section move onto the Regional Speaking competition. Creed is only open to freshmen and it is an event where they recite the six-paragraph FFA Creed and answer three questions asked by the judges. McKinleyville had four Creed speakers at this competition and Madison Donovan placed sixth.

Job Interview is where students participate in a mock job interview including filling out an application and having an interview with a panel of judges. McKinleyville had three Job Interview contestants. Gabby Giraud placed first and Allison McCray placed second, both moving onto regionals.

Impromptu is where the contestant has seven minutes to pick a topic at random, write their speech, and deliver it in the end. McKinleyville had one participant.

Extemporaneous is where students prepare a binder with information before the competition and at the competition they pick three out of 18 topics and then eventually pick one to talk about. They then have half an hour to prepare a four to six-minute speech, after which a panel of judges has five minutes to ask follow-up questions.

McKinleyville had two students compete in this competition, Connor Alto placed first and Kierlyn Guynup placed third, both moving onto regionals.

Prepared is where the contestant writes a six to eight minute speech and memorizes it, then at the competition they deliver it to a panel of judges. McKinleyville had two contestants, Corrina Theisfeld placed first with her speech, Breaking the Marketing Stereotypes Grass Fed and Grain Fed Beef, and Morgan Stubbs placed second with Agritourism A Pathway to Success. Both will move onto regionals.

Overall, it was an amazing competition and the team is looking forward to regionals!

Merry Mickey and Minnie

Back in February of 2020 we could start to see the writing on the walls and knew that very soon many public entities, such as the shelter, would be closing their doors to the public. With that in mind we made a big push to find foster homes for the adoptable dogs so that they wouldn't have to give up the walks and socializing that they had been getting from volunteers. We were able to place many of the dogs and that program proved very successful for almost six months!

As guidelines changed, the volunteers were allowed to come back to the shelter with safety protocols in place and the foster program for our adoptable dogs seemed to not be needed so much, though we have always used fosters for dogs with medical needs. The early months of this year have brought a steady stream of incoming dogs (and no, they are not the so-called "pandemic puppies;" those have stayed with their adoptive families) which is seriously stressing the shelter's capacity. So once again we are looking for foster homes for our adoptable dogs. Just last week, big Jack went to a foster home which he is very much enjoying. He has a meet-and-greet scheduled before this goes to press, so as you read this he may already have moved on to his forever home! His adopters will get to have extra information about his house manners (which have been good) and his general behavior thanks to the privilege of being fostered temporarily.

Our fosters treat the dogs like their own, though they are not responsible for medical expenses and we can provide anything else like food or toys if needed. The foster family just needs to be able to bring the dog back to the shelter if prospective adopters wish to meet him or her. The shelter will give the fosters at least a day's notice for those meetings. If this sounds like something you might be interested in doing, please contact me at redwoodpalsrescue@gmail.com.

Two dogs up for adoption (and potentially available for foster) are Mickey and Minnie. These two came into the shelter together back at the start of December. They could be brother and sister or just friends, hard to say. Whatever their previous circumstances, it seemed that they hadn't had a lot of opportunities to get out and play with other dogs. For a little while they got some extra practice walking with other dogs in order to become more comfortable. It didn't really take long for that and now we know quite a bit about their personalities and what makes each one charming!

Mickey is the male. He is about eight months old with a beautiful fawn colored coat and golden eyes. We love Mickey's ears that mostly stand up with just the tips flopped forward. Mickey loves other dogs and is happiest when he has a walking buddy. He has been complimented by the volunteers for his attentiveness to his handler, frequently checking in as they walk. Mickey has been friendly with every dog he sees and seems equally excited to meet a new person. In the play yard he loves to give kisses to his volunteer friends. Mickey is a nice size at about 45 pounds and probably won't get much bigger. He is already neutered and ready to find his forever home.

Minnie is an eight-month-old female. She looks black on first glance but on further inspection you can see her coat has highlights of red and brown which shine in the sun. Minnie has nice leash manners and is a first pick for any of the volunteers looking for an easy walk. Like Mickey, she has been complimented on how attentive she is to the person walking her. Her happy personality is also popular and leaves the volunteers feeling good. Minnie is just learning the finer points of dog play. She got to have a good romp with fellow resident Pablo last week. He was patient with her and she loved chasing him around the yard! She is very cuddly with her human friends who think she is just a sweetheart. Minnie has been spayed and weighs in at about 40 pounds.

If you would like to meet either of these dogs, please call the Humboldt County Animal Shelter to schedule an appointment. The shelter is open Monday through Friday and can be reached at (707) 840-9132.

Polytechnic | 'This is your moment – congratulations'

CSU press release

January 26, 2022 (LONG BEACH, CA) — Today, the California State University (CSU) Board of Trustees approved a new designation and name for Humboldt State University — California State Polytechnic University, Humboldt. This caps nearly two years of planning by the Hispanic-Serving Institution for new curricula and facilities, increased hands-on student research opportunities, and the expected enrollment growth associated with the enhanced offerings and new designation.

The institution will adopt its new formal name and will be known informally as Cal Poly Humboldt. The state legislature will be asked to incorporate the name into legislation next year.

"Cal Poly Humboldt will be a polytechnic for the 21st-century, preparing students to address the urgent issues our society faces," says Cal Poly Humboldt President Tom Jackson, Jr. "The energy, the new academic programs, the incredible polytechnic foundation already in place, and the positive change associated with our new name and designation begins today for our campus community. We look forward to welcoming new students to a CSU campus with great momentum and an unparalleled trajectory. At Humboldt, we have always 'learned by doing'. There has never been a better time for students to be a part of Cal Poly Humboldt to achieve their goals."

The curricula developed by the faculty will emphasize STEM infused with humanities, arts, and ethics, and will be grounded in sustainability and social justice. Cal Poly Humboldt is located in a region with many tribal Nations and Indigenous wisdom will be respectfully and purposefully reflected in the university's academic offerings.

The designation comes at a critical time as California and the nation face a growing demand for diverse STEM professionals and student demand is strong for programs in engineering and other STEM fields. Cal Poly Humboldt will help meet workforce needs in fields such as engineering, technology, and healthcare, in addition to bridging equity gaps in STEM professions. Regionally, a polytechnic institution will also have a tremendous economic impact on the North Coast, a mostly rural area between the San Francisco Bay Area and Oregon.

"Today's action is an investment in California's future that will help us meet the workforce needs of the 21st century and drive our economic growth for decades to come," says Governor Gavin Newsom, who advanced historic funding to support the university's polytechnic designation in his January state budget proposal last year. "As the CSU's third polytechnic university and the first in Northern California, Cal Poly Humboldt is a point of pride that will expand in-demand STEM opportunities for students across the state and help revitalize North Coast communities."

In August, Gov. Newsom and the state legislature approved $458 million ($433 million in one-time funding and $25 million in ongoing funds) to help support the polytechnic vision.

Funding from that historic investment was allocated to launch at least 12 academic programs by fall 2023. It will also fund extensive infrastructure improvements and new facilities that directly support student success and retention and allows Cal Poly Humboldt to build out new programs and enhance current academic offerings.

The northernmost campus of the 23-campus California State University system, Cal Poly Humboldt follows in the footsteps of the CSU's other polytechnics.

Cal Poly (San Luis Obispo) was established in 1901 followed by Cal Poly Pomona in 1938.

Cal Poly Humboldt will approach its designation by reflecting its strong liberal arts roots and highlighting science in service of society. It is anticipated that Cal Poly Humboldt's continued prioritization of science's social impact will appeal to STEM-oriented students and specifically increase enrollment and graduation among women and diverse students.

"Between the established practices and programs led by first-rate faculty and staff, and the bold aspirations that they have for expanding curricula and serving greater numbers of talented students, Cal Poly Humboldt is a perfect fit as the CSU's third polytechnic institution," says CSU Chancellor Joseph I. Castro.

"My degree in mechanical engineering not only taught me the value of investing in STEM education for our students, but the benefits these programs have on our communities as well," says U.S. Senator Alex Padilla. "By establishing itself as a polytechnic institution, Cal Poly Humboldt will help develop a new class of leaders and a highly educated workforce in the North Coast. I'm proud to support higher funding for Hispanic-Serving Institutions like Humboldt that are doing the day-to-day work of investing in the next generation and putting the future of our students first."

"Congratulations to Humboldt State University on its tremendous transformation to Cal Poly Humboldt, with all the incredible resources and opportunities that will bring to the students and communities of the North Coast," says Congressman Jared Huffman. "This massive investment addresses many of the challenges Cal Poly Humboldt has faced in the current climate of education and brings with it significant benefits to the state and our local economy."

"This is your moment — Congratulations on your transition to Cal Poly Humboldt! That has such a wonderful ring to it! You have worked so hard to prepare for this change by expanding your already high-quality educational programs to include new polytechnic programs that can fill unique and unmet workforce needs," says Assemblymember Jim Wood. "The expansion of STEM fields that can support our climate goals, wildfire management, and other new applied science degree programs are issues close to my heart and ones that I fight for every day. The state has had full confidence in you and this expansion enhances your standing in higher education and will have a major and positive impact on the North Coast's economy, potentially revitalizing it for decades to come. Well done, and well deserved!"

"This is a game changer for this amazing campus community, our regional economy and the greater North Coast," says state Senator Mike McGuire. "This name change is just the first step in a transition that will bring more family sustaining jobs, resources and investment into Northern California. Big congrats to the hard working Cal Poly Humboldt students and dedicated staff - the future is bright for Humboldt County."

Today's designation began in November 2020 when then CSU Chancellor Timothy White asked Humboldt State University to explore the feasibility of becoming a polytechnic.

The University conducted an extensive self-study that culminated in a detailed prospectus outlining the University's vision, plans, budget, and more.

"Throughout campus, and this entire North Coast region, we are very thankful for the vision set forth by Chancellor-Emeritus White and for the support and trust bestowed upon Cal Poly Humboldt by Governor Newsom, the CSU Board of Trustees, and Chancellor Castro," says Jackson. "This designation and the related funding allow Cal Poly Humboldt to serve as an exemplar of the reimagining of higher education for our state's diverse learners. We will continue to align with our state's growing workforce needs and are truly excited to welcome new students to California's newest Cal Poly."

Eagle Scout helps restore Lois Lucchesi Forest

Happy New Year everyone. Hope you are enjoying our traditionally gorgeous January weather, which is providing a fine window for outdoor projects.

On Jan. 15 BSA Troop 15 worked on a conservation service project in the Jacoby Creek valley to assist fellow Troop member, Jackson Zagone, with his Eagle Scout project.

The Scouts installed biodegradable erosion control wattles along a steep stretch of trail in the Lois Lucchesi Forest, a twenty acre second-growth redwood stand located approximately five miles up Jacoby Creek Road. Zagone will monitor the site over the next month after which he will lead troop volunteers in revegetating the area with native plants including sword ferns and huckleberries. Finally, scouts will build and install a bench to provide a tranquil resting spot in this beautiful redwood forest in Jacoby Creek.

Eagle Scout Projects like this provide opportunities for a Scout to demonstrate leadership of others while doing something that benefits their community. The Lois Lucchesi Forest is held in public trust by the Jacoby Creek Land Trust for the purposes of conservation, scientific research, and recreation.

Please stay on the trails if you go to allow native vegetation to take hold in the restoration area. For more information contact JCLT at jacobycreeklt@gmail.com or (707) 822-0900.

I've also been watching the activity at Jacoby Creek School Garden where lots of new planter beds, beautifully made in a variety of interesting shapes and sizes, are getting installed. I think we can look forward to a gorgeous show there come late spring.

So many questions about the Gateway Area Plan

After listening to the presentation about The Gateway Project (TGP) that was given to the Arcata City Council in December, 2021 I attended the Open House at the Community Center on Saturday, Jan. 22. I was told this project has been in the planning stage for five years. While I'm an avid reader of all local papers, I missed it somehow. I am concerned about what is anticipated in TGP and urge the Council to go slow before approving any steps towards its initiation until more people learn about and understand the significance of what it will mean and cost residents of our city.

The enormous size of 138 acres being rezoned entirely residential for 3500 NEW HOUSING UNITS, instead of mostly industrial as it now is, first surprised, then puzzled me. It is so hard to describe that I urge the large map be posted outside City Hall so that people can view it even when the building is closed. The 200 page document should be available for checkout in the library and elsewhere; it is impossible to comprehend quickly.

What would happen to Wing Inflatables? Not evicted, of course, but could it expand if need be? The hurdles it would face cannot be underestimated; probably, not permitted. There are other companies within this parcel. Many are small and might relocate if a suitable, affordable space could be found. How do these businesses view this project? I was told there were email/letters sent to all parcel owners. TWELVE were personally interviewed. I failed to ask how many were supportive or not. I was given the paper copy of TGP when I asked if I could buy one.

Throughout the document there is reference to this being a BIKE/PEDESTRIAN community. There will be parking space for approximately half the actual number of residential units planned. These will include all sizes from single room occupancy space (SROs) to penthouses, and all number of bedrooms so that, presumably, families with children can be accommodated. Bike racks, two lane bike paths, six foot wide sidewalks in some areas, a few new streets, lots of trees and some buildings EIGHT STORIES HIGH. Only developers who include certain amenities will be permitted to construct the higher buildings.

The issues of affordable housing exists, statewide and nationally. But for a town of under 20,000 people undertake this without greater input from the community is unwise, in my opinion. I read nothing about soil tests to ascertain where subsoils to support multifloor buildings exist. What about rising sea levels? I HAVE read a lot about that in various papers recently.

The COST of the new streets, water/sewer, utilities and fire protection was not discussed. Who pays for that? It is expected that there will be restaurants and other small businesses, as well as, presumably, developers willing to invest in to-be-rented housing contributing. Will that be enough? If not, issuing bonds, increasing sales taxes, property taxes, fees of all sorts might fill in the considerable gap.

In closing, I appreciate the work done by Dave Loya and his Planning Department. His staff never heard of a colossal failure of "planners" in the mid 50s called Pruitt-Igde Housing outside of St. Louis, Mo. High rise apartments for low income families. Within two years there were problems; in less than 20 years they were imploded, and not yet paid for!! Maybe things have changed, but I doubt it. People need space.

Councilmembers, please GO SLOW.

Sincerely,
Sara Turner

Evocative reading

I cannot recall more pleasant, evocative and insightful column-inches in the Union than the two parts of "The Future of Arcata."

Daniel Duncan is a multi-faceted gem. I look forward to whatever else he may contribute to these pages.

Chip Sharpe
Bayside

By the time o8 landed, the wheeled suitcase had become universal and cheap, a thing so practical that even a senior citizen could navigate a transatlantic airplane ride with one of those compact gizmos fully loaded and riding snugly in the compartment above his seat on the airplane, ready to follow its master around like a personal valet with a retractable arm that shot up on command.

My goal was Montargis (pronounced Mon-TAR-zge), located in the middle of France, one hour 20 minutes from Paris by train. That meant first getting from the airport to the Gare de Lyon, where the train to Montargis originated. It was midmorning and I was in no particular hurry. Sally lived in a 200-year-old farmhouse that had already become everything it was ever going to be. I had been there once before and I knew what to expect: a one-story fieldstone off-white stuccoed building, its roofline sagging in the center, its inner rough hewn beams old as time, and beautiful as the now.

After Googling directions, I climbed aboard a swift modern train to the closest metro stop in the city to the Gare de Lyon. The train traveled above ground from the De Gaulle airport through green fields, the same farmland that had fed the French people for a couple of thousand years — and fed them well — since the Pre-Roman days when it was called Gaul. Somewhere outside the spreading city grid, the speedy train dove underground. At the Saint-Germain-des-Prés station, I got out, carried my suitcase upstairs by its leather top-handle, and stood at the intersection to get my bearings. I tried consulting my smart phone but the strong sun-glare on the phone's screen made that impossible, so I put it away and looked around.

Then a strange thing happened. Everything I had done to get here, it seemed, evaporated in my brain like some dream that had outlived its purpose and was no longer relevant. I was suddenly wide awake to that out there, all those citizens going about their business, waiting at the light, crossing the street, buying a newspaper at the kiosk, lounging against the metro iron railing smoking a cigarette, accelerating by on a motor scooter, people of every type striding down the crowded sidewalks in every direction, that was reality, not me or my insignificant transatlantic flight to get here, Nobody paid any attention to me. For all they cared or noticed, I could have been standing there just like them, or not. I just happened to have showed up. This was the

What Arcata can learn from Paris

End and the Beginning of everything that would matter from now on.

As if I were an empty vessel, my entire body began to fill with intense feelings about this Parisian streetcorner. Without doing anything, without expecting anything like this, I became instantly — I cannot say it any other way — happy. When you're happy like this, you become fully there — where you are — and you can't change it and don't want to. The feeling on that street corner had a lot to do with the bright sunlight pouring down from the luminous blue sky and landing on the sidewalks, sliding along the old buildings, bouncing off the cars and scooters and bicycles going swiftly by, energizing the foot traffic, from the most well-dressed and fashionable to the plainest bum, or casual tourist like myself. I was definitely a part of this scene. I was not outside looking in. I felt the warmth of sunlight down to my bones. Like everybody else, I inhabited this light and it inhabited me. It felt like an invisible tissue that was continuously in motion, entering life and non-life in all its forms, turning into the individual being of each thing, of each one of us, of every brick and cobblestone and iron railing and doorway and shopkeeper and scrap of paper lying in the gutter.

I had planned to take a bus or some public transportation to the Gare de Lyon but I just started walking instead. Almost helplessly, I put myself in motion along the wide Boulevard Saint-Germain sidewalk, suitcase trailing behind. Fortuitously, I had landed on one of the city's most famous streets, and justly so, and I was in no hurry. My smart phone had reported — I read this in the dark before I climbed out of the metro — that it was 18 minutes to the Gare de Lyon train station. I didn't know it at the time but the screen was registering the taxi mode, not the guy-walking-down-the-street mode. So I was off by an hour or so. I had a ways to go, which I would eventually discover, but that hardly mattered. For I didn't want this spontaneous and unique event in my life ever to end.

It seems that almost everybody has been to Paris, or at least experienced it in movies. I don't need to tell you about all the little flower shops, the outdoor cafes, the larger ones with indoor seating separated by "French" wood doors that opened like accordions, the bookshops, fruit-sellers, the bakeries with their pungent odors spilling out, the elegant clothing storefronts, the sidewalks wider than the streets of many other cities, the motorcycles and scooters lined up side by side along the curb and still leaving plenty of room for pedestrians. I walked along taking it all in. happy. That was me, this traveler from a little town in Northern California named Arcata, located not far from the second-most beautiful city in the world, San Francisco.

How the hell does Paris bring off this miracle when most cities in the world, including if not especially New York, feel so choked ings fronting the sidewalk was not interrupted once by one of them rising taller than its fellows into the sky, sticking up its imperial head and taking all the light for itself. Yes, Paris has one skyscraper within the city limits, the Montparnasse Tower, but it was a mistake and everybody hates it.

You can see where I'm going with this, my friends in Arcata.

We are not alone in the struggle to keep our skyline low in order to let in every bit of light that we can get, for it is a precious commodity here in Humboldt

For that is what matters. That is what keeps people bound together in a fluid medium. It's natural light that energizes people and somehow makes us considerate of each other, as if to be fully human, and to treat other people right, a "space" must be left around each individual. Space for personal atmosphere. Space for light. Space for movement. That is the secret.

up with people and are oppressed with ugly buildings that crush the soul? What does Paris do that other cities don't do? Is it the cafes? the weather? the extraordinary hub-with-spokes radiating pattern of the boulevards, the many parks and museums? the rich and long history?

I stopped at one of the cafes and sitting outside (naturally!) ordered an omelet which the efficient waiter delivered promptly with toast, coffee and a slice of tomato (why a tomato? I don't know. It's a French thing. Did I ever have a better tasting tomato in my life?) I was leaning back in my chair looking up the Boulevard St-Germain. And there, I saw the reason. It was this very thing that was everywhere: The light. All that light pouring down into the street over the building tops. Everywhere, throughout the entire city. Light. How was that possible?

No skyscrapers in Paris, that's how. Just uniform six-story architecture everywhere, not one of the buildings sticking up to block the light. For that is what matters. That is what keeps people bound together in a fluid medium. It's natural light that energizes people and somehow makes us considerate of each other, as if to be fully human, and to treat other people right, a "space" must be left around each individual. Space for personal atmosphere. Space for light. Space for movement. That is the secret. I saw it when I looked up the block and my vision of the mass of build-

County. Paris also has had to fight to keep its low skyline and that fight has been going on for centuries and continues today. (For more on this topic see traditionalbuilding.com/opinions/paris-without-skyscrapers.)

But before I go, I want to tell you what happened on the bridge. My destination to the Gare de Lyon lay across the River Seine. The arched stone roadway of the bridge had lanes for cars in the middle and wide sidewalks on each side for the pedestrians. For Paris, as everybody knows, is nothing if not a walkable city. My body was starting to get tired and I began to wonder why it was taking me so long to get to the train station, but my mistake had not yet dawned in my consciousness.

I stopped on the bridge and looked up the river. There were bends but I could see a lot of the city. Of course, just to make the romance of the moment more perfect, the Notre Dame Cathedral rose up in the horizon, its towers pointing to the Higher Realm. Just up the sidewalk leaning on the rail, a pair of lovers embraced in a passionate kiss, a sight you don't see in America. But here in France, expressions of affection in public are as common as they are natural. That's another reason to love this so human place called Paris.

Hearing the clop-clop of horses, I turn, and (borrowing shamelessly from Midnight in Paris) sitting in the lane across from me a Louis the 14th imperial horse-drawn carriage idles. It has stopped in the center of the span, barely 25 feet away. How beautiful it is, its golden frame glowing and magnificent in the midday sunlight. In the box sits a woman in a bright green dress with a dark cape with blond hair the color of wheat streaming over her shoulders. She holds the reins of four white steeds who stand still, quivering with strength and power. She looks ahead, her profile revealing a bold and straight nose with thin everted nostrils exhaling power and energy like the steeds she commands. And I know immediately it is Artemis, the huntress, and her passengers are important personages.

Gazing out the two windows towards me are the faces of two very old men whom I have seen before, but I can't remember where. Both are smiling as if to express their fondness for a person like myself, as if they wanted me to know that they saw me standing there and they knew what I was thinking and feeling. Then I recognized who they were.

The man on the left was Frank Lloyd Wright. The man on the right was Plato. The door opened and Mr. Wright waved me towards the carriage, while Plato looked on.

"Come, Dan, and sit with us," said Mr. Wright.

His companion, Plato, added in an encouraging voice, "Won't you ride with us to the Land of the Blessed?"

I smiled and shook my head. "No thank you, Immortals. I am on my way to visit my friend, Sally. She is making fish for dinner and she'll be disappointed if I don't show."

Wright nodded and the carriage door clicked. Plato leaned out and gave Artemis the signal. She snapped the reins and off the carriage flew. I think it went up into the sky and disappeared into the golden light over the city. I remembered Plato talking about such a possibility in The Phaedrus and Plato, if anybody, would have the best knowledge of the Realm of Being.

I grabbed the handle of the suitcase and pulled it along behind me the rest of the way across the bridge, continuing down the other side of the River Seine towards the train station.

My back started to hurt from so much walking. That was when I realized I had made a mistake in my calculations, if mistake is the right word to describe my stroll down the Boulevard St-Germain and what just happened to me back there on the bridge.

Maybe it was just Truth Itself alighting momentarily in the human realm? Paris does things like that to a person.

Head-on crash kills Samoa man

MAD RIVER UNION
WOODLEY ISLAND – A man died and a juvenile received major injuries in a head-on crash on State Route 22 on Monday, Jan. 24.

Dwayne Faughn, 49, of Samoa died at the scene of the crash. A six-year-old, who was a passenger in the car with Faughn, was taken to a hospital with major injuries.

At approximately 8:54 p.m. on Jan. 24, Humboldt Area California Highway Patrol received a report of a head-on crash on State Route 255 near Startare Drive (near Woodley Island).

Personnel from Eureka Police Department, Humboldt Bay Fire, Humboldt County Sheriff's Office, City Ambulance of Eureka, California Department of Transportation, and California Highway Patrol responded to the scene.

Based on the preliminary investigation, CHP has determined that a 2000 Lexus was being driven southbound on SR-255 approaching a 2020 Jeep being driven northbound on SR-255. For reasons yet to be determined, both vehicles collided head-on, causing major injuries to all occupants of the involved vehicles, and came to rest blocking the roadway.

Shortly after the initial collision, a 2008 Ford being driven southbound on SR-255, crashed into the stationary Lexus and Jeep, causing minor injuries to the driver of the Ford.

The driver of the Lexus, Dwayne Faughn succumbed to his injuries on scene and was pronounced deceased by emergency medical personnel. A juvenile passenger in the Lexus, whose identity is being withheld due to her age, suffered major injuries and was transported from the scene by emergency medical personnel.

Both the driver and passenger of the Jeep were transported to St. Joseph Hospital for treatment of their injuries.

The CHP Humboldt Area Office is continuing its investigation and asks anyone who witnessed the crash, or has any additional information related to the crash, to contact the California Highway Patrol at (707) 822-5981.

"The California Highway Patrol extends its condolences to the family of the deceased, and thanks all responding agencies, as well as the citizens who stopped to help, for their assistance in managing the scene," states a press release from CHP.

Motorcycle chase ends with a trip to jail

HUMBOLDT COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE

OBITUARY

Nicole Marie Nada

Sept. 4, 1970 – Jan. 22, 2022

Nicole Marie Nada was loved by all. Generosity, kindness, humor and compassion were just a few of the characteristics that made her the kind of person that everyone loved to be around. She was a sage with advice, and an exceptionally great friend to many.

Always an adventurer, Nicole was blessed to explore Hawaii, the glaciers of Alaska in a kayak, Baja California, Belize, Mexico, Guatemala, the Galapagos Islands, Ecuador and Holland, as well as innumerable epic backpacking adventures, river rafting trips, grand bike and car trips throughout the US, including summer vacations with family in the East Coast.

Equally, she cherished adventures to Humboldt's Dry Lagoon, beach days at Moonstone and hikes to Strawberry Rock or Arcata Marsh. With stage IV cancer, 4 months before her death, Nicole rafted down the Colorado River in the Grand Canyon for 16 days and then took her children on an incredible fun-filled journey through California.

Over the years, Nicole climbed mountain peaks with her friends, the Mountain Mammass, read hundreds of books with her dedicated book club, was part of a women's business circle and a knitting group. Nicole adored all animals, sharing her home and yard with rabbits, guinea pigs, cats, dogs, chickens and bees over the years.

She was continuously attending to her spiritual growth, gleanng wisdom from many teachers of various traditions, always looking for inspiration to be the best person she could be. She cherished, above all else, being a mother to Taylor and Asher, who are testaments to the conscious and loving mother that she was.

Nicole was born in Los Angeles, and moved to Marin where she lived most of her childhood, roaming in the Marin hills, with a particular fondness for the Yolanda Trail in the Mount Tam watershed.

As a young adult, Nicole was a river guide and cross country ski guide for Environmental Traveling Companions. She worked as an environmental educator at Point Bonita YMCA. Moving to Humboldt for college, she studied plant biology at College of the Redwoods and Humboldt State.

In her early days in Humboldt County, she was a well known friendly face at the Arcata Co-op and Northtown Books, working later as a plant biologist for Simpson Lumber and then as a planner for Redwood Community Action Agency where, among other tasks, she created and implemented plans for the North Coast Stormwater Coalition.

Nicole was co-founder and co-owner of the Arcata Scoop, and specifically loved designing the interior with unique and beautiful handcrafted furniture and art. She studied and received a nutritionist certificate from Bauman College and became passionate about assisting people to improve their health through her business, Shifting Gears Nutrition.

Most recently, she worked for Salmonid Restoration Federation at their annual conference and Six Rivers Montessori. Nicole was recently inspired to get her certificate as a life coach in order to incorporate these skills into her business when she was diagnosed with a second bout of cancer.

Nicole shared her time and resources generously, getting involved with as many community events as possible and caring for community members every chance she got. One inspirational endeavor was her bike ride from Arcata to Marin for her first chemo treatment in 2011, where she raised money for cancer research and blogged about her experience, inspiring and educating many along the way.

Her last great teaching before she passed was how to die; Many lives have been transformed through the experience of Nicole's preparation for, and thoughts about her death, which she considered a rebirth.

Nicole will be remembered for so many of her gifts, including her humor and her great stories. Amazing things always happened to Nicole, and she had just the right way to have you in stitches when she told you about it.

She is survived by her two beloved children, Taylor and Asher, their father Garret Nada, numerous family members and a wide community of friends. A small burial service was held at the Trinidad Cemetery and a grand celebration of her life will be planned and held in Humboldt County in the near future. Updates can be found by searching Nicole Nada at Caringbridge.com

The project would repave Old Arcata Road, enhance bicycle lanes on both sides of the roadway alignment, improve and extend an existing shared use walkway along the west side of Old Arcata Road from approximately 600 feet south of the Buttermilk Road Roundabout and extending south to approximately 300 feet beyond the Jacoby Creek Road intersection. Sidewalks and cross walks throughout the project corridor would also be improved, including a new sidewalk on Hyland Street, and associated drainage improvements limited to the public right of way. The project includes a new roundabout at the intersection of Old Arcata Road and Jacoby Creek Road. The total project length is approximately one mile.

Project Location: In the public right of way on Old Arcata Road from approximately 600 feet south of the Buttermilk Road Roundabout and extending south to approximately 300 feet south and west of the Jacoby Creek Road intersection. A portion of the affected roadway east of the Bayside cutoff is outside of City limits and lies within Humboldt County jurisdiction. Roadway has no assigned Assessor Parcel Number or address.

Application Date: April 14, 2021
Owner/Applicant: The City of Arcata and County of Humboldt hold both ownership over sections the associated affected roadway.

Open House at lighthouse

The 1871 Trinidad Head Lighthouse will be open for tours on Saturday, Feb. 5 from 10 a.m. to noon courtesy of the Bureau of Land Management-California Coastal National Monument, Trinidad Museum Society docents and the Trinidad Rancheria. Pedestrians only.

Park near Trinidad State Beach and walk approximately one half mile up Trinidad Head and you'll come to the open chain link gate. Volunteer docents will greet you at the lighthouse on the southwest corner of the Bureau of Land Management grounds.

When you climb into the 25-foot light station, be sure to look to the southeast and you'll view the last Fog Bell Shack in California, which has operated electronically since 1949 and is still an important navigational aid to mariners. The original two-ton bronze bell fabricated in San Francisco in 1898, is in the harbor area next to the 1949 Memorial Lighthouse.

In related news, the Coastal Development Permit application to permanently place the Memorial Lighthouse approximately where it is now but raised about seven feet on a concrete foundation with the Fog Bell placed on a pedestal, was submitted to the California Coastal Commission on Jan. 14, 2022.

Trinidad Civic Club and the Cher-Ae Heights Indian Community of the Trinidad Rancheria are co-applicants. The permit documents run to about 1,000 pages of photographs, studies, plans, designs, letters of support and outreach meeting information.

The Grading Permit was approved by the City Planning Commission on June 28, 2022. The co-applications are aiming to complete the project this year.

Growing Awareness of Fields and the Neuropsychology of Change Workshop

If you don't know what this paragraph heading means, you can find out by attending a four-day virtual workshop on March 8 to 11, 2022 from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Mary Gelinas, Ed.D., David Sibbet, and Alan Briskin, Ph.D. are change agents, process leaders and individuals who have been immersed in the challenge of designing, leading and participating in collaborative processes while "swimming in this swirl" world wide. They are working "to step back from the spinning flows of propaganda go deeper into the larger fields and how they shape our inner and outer focus. They have plunged into the world of neuroscience and social psychology and are finding some hopeful perspectives."

The workshop leaders are inviting you to join the exploration of generating expanding fields of awareness in which people can interact with more presence, compassion and collective wisdom. Dr. Gelinas writes, "We learn more every day about how interconnected the brain, mind and body are and how they influence and are influenced by fields of force inside and around us."
